Calls for Australia to follow NZ in ratifying nuclear weapons- banning treaty

Nobel Peace Prize-winning organisation ICAN says Australia's stance on nuclear weapons is 'a threat to humanity'.

The group is calling for the government to follow New Zealand, who this week ratified a United Nations treaty banning nuclear weapons.

ABC News: 27th July 2018

Donald Trump could be ready to order a strike against Iran, Australian Government figures say
Senior figures in the Turnbull Government have told the ABC they believe the United States is prepared to bomb Iran's nuclear capability, perhaps as early as next month, and that Australia is poised to help identify possible targets.

Key points:

- Senior Government figures say Australian defence facilities would likely play a role in identifying possible targets
- But another senior source, in security, emphasises there is a difference between providing intelligence and "active targeting"
- Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull says he has no reason to believe the US is preparing for a confrontation

It comes amid intense sabre-rattling by US President Donald Trump and his Iranian counterpart Hassan Rouhani.

The ABC has been told secretive Australian defence facilities would likely play a role in identifying targets in Iran, as would British intelligence agencies.

Media release: 27th July, 2018

Australia should not assist in US Attacks on Iran

“Whilst hoping that it may be inaccurate, IPAN is disturbed at the news that the USA is planning an attack on Iran’s nuclear facilities. It is outraged at the report that Australia probably will be actively involved in this planning,” said Nick Deane, National Committee member of the Independent and Peaceful Australia Network.

“The Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA), signed between Iran and the five members of the US Security Council and Germany in 2015, was reached after extensive and patient negotiations conducted in good faith. It showed the world that negotiation is a better path to peace than threats of violence and war.

“The USA unilaterally withdrew from the agreement in May and is now planning to conduct an attack. The good work of diplomacy is being undone by this threat of extreme violence.

Two thirds of Yemenis need aid.
Is the Australian Government helping prolong this war ?

As of March 2017, an estimated 18.8 million people - 69% of Yemen's population - needed some kind of humanitarian or protection assistance, according to the UN Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA). That includes 10.3 million in acute need, who urgently require immediate, life-saving assistance in at least one sector.

The civil war in Yemen has been prolonged and exacerbated by foreign interference particularly direct military interference from Saudi Arabia with the backing of the US. The Australian Senate Estimates committee recently discovered that Australia has increased its military sales to Saudi Arabia by $2 billion and the Australian government has "no idea" as to whether those military sales have been used against the people of Yemen in this war.

IPAN Campaign launched- End the Force Posture Agreement & send the US Marines back home

Richard Broinowski speaking at IPAN's campaign launch at the NSW Teachers Federation Auditorium, 17th July

The Independent and Peaceful Australia Network (IPAN) launched its "Give 'em the boot" campaign, aimed at ending Australia's Force Posture Agreement with the US and sending the US Marines based in Darwin back home, at a "Keep Australia out of US wars" public meeting on 17th July. The meeting was held in the NSW Teachers Federation Auditorium in Surrey Hills. The effective audience exceeded the physical audience many times over as over 700 tuned in to the internet live feed from the auditorium. The meeting was chaired by Annette Brownlie, IPAN's Chairperson.

Former Australian ambassador to Vietnam, South Korea and Mexico and recent NSW President of the Australian Institute of International Affairs, Richard Broinowski, told the audience : "For some considerable time we have been embedded in US wars.... Australia seems to have learned nothing from history in regards to our government's foreign policy. Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull's statement that 'we're joined at the hip with the US' is outrageous. NSW Green's Senator Lee Rhiannon told the forum: " From the Green's perspective, the Australia-US alliance should be ripped up. Public spending on wars and military equipment wastes resources that should be used for the public good. We need to push for the dismantling of the entire military -industrial complex.... The challenge before us now is to build a strong peace and anti-nuclear movement in order to confront these threats of war, and end the Australia-US military alliance".

Give 'em the boot spokesperson, Nick Deane said: "We are seeking support for IPAN's campaign to get the US Marines out of Darwin... This force is an attack force which is proclaimed as "Ready to fight tonight". These Marines are not there to defend Australia, they are on orders from Washington, not Canberra. And the US is the most violent country on earth. We are calling for an end to the Force Posture Agreement with the US which authorises the marines stationed in Darwin and gives access to US ships and aircraft to make use of our port facilities and aircraft runways whenever they choose. We need people to get involved in the "Give 'em the boot" campaign. That is why we are symbolically collecting boots for delivery to the Australian Government".

Progress in "Give 'em the boot" campaign:

- * Campaign launched at public meeting in Sydney, 17th July, 2018
- * First 10,000 campaign leaflets letter-boxed in Sydney and Newcastle
- * Second 10,000 campaign leaflets letter-boxing currently in progress in Sydney and Newcastle
- * 61 peace workers involved in letter-boxing

* IPAN speakers have addressed a number of community organisations seeking support for the campaign including politics- in -the- pub, Newcastle Trades Hall Council, ALP and peace groups

* over 40 pairs of boots collected so far, for "presentation to government later this year at a rally calling for "giving 'em the boot"

Making Australia a base for the U.S. military- The Force Posture Agreement-

Bevan Ramsden (NSW IPAN Rep)

US marines in action on war training exercise in Qld.

The Force Posture Agreement between the Governments of the U.S. and Australia facilitates:

The stationing in Darwin, for six months each year, of up to 2,500 US Marines; they are trained and equipped for immediate deployment and who, while in Australia, train for war in exercises with the Australian Defence Forces

- Access to Australia's airfields and airport facilities for US fighter planes and bombers
- "Unimpeded access for United States Forces and contractors to and use of "agreed areas and facilities" for training, transit, support, and related activities; refuelling of aircraft; bunkering of vessels; temporary maintenance of vehicles, vessels and aircraft; temporary accommodation of personnel; communications' pre-positioning of equipment, supplies and materials; deploying forces and materials; and such other activities as the Parties may agree."

This Agreement makes Australia a base in the Indo-Pacific-South East Asia for the U.S. military and from which they can launch hostile acts against our neighbours. Currently they have in their sights on the islands claimed by China in the South China sea and some commentators have said they have their sights set on blocking the straits of Malacca in order to put pressure on China by blocking its major shipping route.

It's time to face the truth about Anzus: it's worse than no treaty at all-
Henry Reynolds

Trump's erratic behaviour has finally provoked serious discussion about the US-Australian alliance. But is Australia capable of having the debate?

But two conclusions present themselves. Australia's tradition of deference was initially enhanced by the Trump ascendancy.

Malcolm Turnbull's declaration that we were joined at the hip is only the most egregious example of obsequiousness. Our words exude the subservience of an insecure functionary in the court of a capricious tyrant. Have our leaders no self-respect?

The second thing to note is the way in which the whole complex relationship with the United States is conflated with the Anzus alliance. This massively exaggerates the significance of the treaty and diminishes the autonomous relationships associated with trade, travel, tourism and investment. They have a life of their own and would have been much the same whether or not there was a military alliance. And Australia would have had close diplomatic relations with the United States even if Anzus had never been conceived. For complete article READ ON

Hiroshima Day in Alice Springs remembers impact of atomic blasts on indigenous Australians

Over 70 people came to a Hiroshima Day dinner in Alice Springs , organised by the local chapter of IPAN, at which Karina Lester, daughter of the late Yami Lester, was the guest speaker.

Ms Lester together with her sister Rose continue the campaign against the whole nuclear cycle led by their father, whose traditional lands were devastated by the British nuclear tests of the 1950s. Mr Lester is also said to have been blinded by the tests' infamous "black mist".

Ms Lester's campaigning includes her participation in events organised by International Coalition for the Abolition of Nuclear Weapons (ICAN), including a World Nuclear Victims Forum held in the Peace Park at Hiroshima in 2015.

Yami Lester: Aboriginal activist, elder and nuclear campaigner dies aged 75

By Dijana Damjanovic
Updated 22 Jul 2017, 5:34pm

Aboriginal elder and activist Yami Lester has died in Alice Springs aged 75.

Mr Lester suffered vision impairment after being blinded by a nuclear test bomb that blew through his homelands in the far north of South Australia during the 1950s.

He spent his early years working on pastoral properties across South Australia, until losing his eyesight as a teenager and becoming completely blind — a consequence of dust from the nuclear bomb.

His family said his death "leaves an incredible legacy of better global understanding of the devastation of nuclear bombs and for the ongoing battle for recognition for the consequence of them".

Speaking to ABC Rural 2011, Mr Lester recalled his experience with clarity. "I was a kid," he said. "I got up early in the morning, about 7:00am, playing with a homemade toy." "We heard the big bomb went off that morning, a loud noise and the ground shook." "I don't know how long after we seen this quiet black smoke — oily and shiny — coming across from the south." "Next time we had sore eyes, skin rash, diarrhea and vomiting everybody, old people too."

His family said his local, national and international campaign for the clean up of Maralinga after the British nuclear testing of the 1950s and 60s was his life's work.

Mr Lester campaigned for the rights of Aboriginal people who were in the area at the time, leading to the establishment of the McClelland Royal Commission. The commission went on to recommend group compensation for Maralinga's Tjarutja people and the clean up of Uranium contamination on Tjarutja lands.

He was also a staunch land rights activist in the handback of Anangu Pitjantjatjara (APY Lands) to traditional owners in 1985, and central to the return of Uluru to traditional owners.

Hiroshima Day in Newcastle calls for Government to sign the Ban-the-Bomb treaty

"I'm here because we are seeing an increasing movement in universities around the country to invest in the defence contractors and to allow them on to campuses for research purposes. This means that my fees as a student are going toward war profiteers. It's a phenomen we have seen at Melbourne Uni and ANU with their contracts with Lockheed Martin an arms company.

In the Newcastle we're looking into the universities ties with war profiteers. Nationally the National Union of students is working on a books not bombs campaign to get defence contractors out of uni. To stop the federal governments investment in arms dealers and to instead redirect these resources into our universities. If you're a student who is interested in this campaign and don't want your student fees going to war profiteers get involved in the campaign by getting in touch with Newcastle University Student Association"

Alex Edney-Browne (Melbourne University) right photo, also spoke out against militarisation of universities but also spoke movingly of her research into the impact of the US Drone Assassination program on civilians in Afghanistan in which she had personally visited victims of this illegal US program. She spoke out against Australia's involvement with the US in Afghanistan and said Australia needs an independent foreign policy and to step away from the US-Australia military alliance (for which she received much ovation from those at the rally).

Bevan Ramsden (IPAN and HPG rep) spoke of the need for dedication to the campaign to get the government to sign the ban-the-bomb treaty and to campaign for an independent and peaceful Australia which spent on social need not arms manufacture and export and moved the following motion:

"We the participants in the Hunter Peace Group's Hiroshima Day March and Rally held 4th August, 2018 call on the Federal Coalition Government to sign the United Nations Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons"

This motion passed unanimously and was forward to Malcolm Turnbull and Julie Bishop requesting the reason for the Government not yet signing the Treaty and to Bill Shorten and Penny Wong asking if signing the Treaty would be ALP policy when in government.

*Australian Defence Policy, in lockstep with the US as regards
“managing” the rise of China, embraces the deployment of US
Marines to Darwin as being consistent with the national interest.
Where the social fabric of the Northern Territory is concerned, however, the potential for Darwin to be just another locale to be* trashed by the US military has not been sufficiently investigated.

For Australia China is the source of a bipolar condition – the need to not significantly disagree with the US on matters strategic, alternating with the need to acknowledge China as the country's premier market. They cannot be reconciled in the same body politic without eventually giving rise to a breakdown.

In the interim the potential for other damage to Australia attracts almost no attention despite the fact that, with over 800 US bases and military installations in 70 countries, there is a growing body of disconcerting evidence. Arising from it is the question: what might be the deleterious social impact of having 2,500 on Australian soil given the extensive history of other such deployments? Sadly, it appears that this question was never seriously considered.

Armed Neutrality for Australia?-

Katherine Kelly - 16th July, 2018

Australia's security strategy should have the objective of defence of Australia, whilst also aiming to contribute to peace in the region and globally. Our dependence on America can no longer guarantee the defence of Australia, nor does it contribute to peace regionally or globally. The opposite is in fact the case – if we have any enemies, they are largely courtesy of our alliance and subservience to the US. Malcolm Fraser recognised and warned about this in his book 'Dangerous Allies' but the current Government and Opposition have not yet recognised it....

Throughout Australia's history we have placed our trust in having a strong protector – firstly Britain and since the Second World War, the USA. This strategy has, ever since the post WW2 period, taken us into wars – Korea, Vietnam, Afghanistan, Iraq and Syria – none of which can be said to have made Australia or the world a safer or more peaceful place.....

A strategy of Neutrality may come closest to achieving the defence of Australia as well as contributing to peace regionally and globally.....

Foreign bases would be precluded under neutrality.....

If a neutrality policy were declared to the United Nations, we would need to ensure that our defence forces and purchases were directed at ensuring the defence of Australia.

Timorese protest Australia's prosecution of 'Witness K' and lawyer

Movement Against the Occupation of the Timor Sea (MKOTT) press conference on July 20 in Dili, Timor Leste.

Public Statement on the prosecution against Witness K and Bernard Collaery by the Australian government

It is with great astonishment and sadness that on 28 June the Movimentu Kontra Okupasaun Tasi Timor—the Movement Against the Occupation of the Timor Sea (MKOTT) learned that the Australian Lawyer Bernard Collaery and the Australian former Inteligence Officer "Witness K" have both been charged for revealing the Australian Government Spying on Timor-Leste's Cabinet Room during the negotiations for off-shore natural resources in the Timor Sea between Timor-Leste and Australia in 2004.....MKOTT strongly condemns the charges against Lawyer Collaery and Witness K as politically motivated, which the movement regards as an attack on the freedom of expression and attack on democracy by the Australian government. This act on the part of the Australian government also shows that the government will use anything to pursue Australia's commercial interests in relations with its neighbors, even if it violates international law to deprive one of its poorest neighbor, and will crush anyone or anything stands on its way.

AUSMIN and contradictions between Corporate Australia & the Coalition Government

Julie Bishop and Mike Pompeo at recent AUSMIN conference

The Recent AUSMIN conference and growing contradictions between corporate Australia and the Coalition Government

- by Richard Stone

(Extracts)

The recent Australia-United States Ministerial Consultations (AUSMIN) summit, mid-July, took place while US-led forces attempt to roll-back China's influence in the Asia-Pacific region.

Problems, however, have arisen for the Turnbull Coalition government in Canberra.

The problems reveal far more than minor differences of opinion; they are about economic support and trade relations with China itself, which is Australia's biggest trading partner.

The recent AUSMIN summit took place amid heightened concern that US hegemonic positions in the region are being threatened, and indeed downgraded, with the rapid rise of China's influence with accelerating economic growth rates.

Immediately prior to the official opening of the AUSMIN summit, US congressman Joe Courtney, co-chair of the Friends of Australia, 'called on Australia to conduct its own freedom-of-navigation-operations against China in the South China Sea. (7) Linking the request to official AUSMIN diplomacy, Courtney also stated he hoped the summit, 'would lead to Australia conducting its own exercise'. (8)

Australia, historically, has sent ships and planes close to the 12-mile zones around China's maritime facilities in the South China Sea. US military planning now, however, want Australia to take a more dynamic role challenging China on behalf of the US.

Secondly, the position of the Turnbull government in Canberra to take a stronger pro-US line with China over so-called foreign interference 'has left the government and business wildly at odds over the state of the bilateral relationship'. (12) There is a growing division between state and class power within the higher echelons of Australia.

The corporate sector, however, remain quite content to have favourable trade relations with China, and a large section of the Australian working-class are employed either directly or indirectly with such economic relations.

Progressive-minded people should exploit these differences of opinion for all they are worth to rid this country of such pro-US clowns and sychophants. We need a government to serve our needs, not theirs. And we urgently need an independent foreign policy before we are dragged into a war-situation with China which will decimate our economy and the living standards of ordinary working-people.

Toxic soil stockpile at Williamstown RAAF base as base prepares for housing F35 Fighters

Tonnes of contaminated soil is being stockpiled at Williamstown RAAF base until the Department of Defence figures out what to do with it. The PFAS contaminated soil was dug up during the redevelopment of the base to accept the F35 fighters purchased at $120 million each by the Federal Government.

The contamination has spreads from the base into residential areas surrounding Williamstown base now defined as “red areas” in which ground water cannot be accessed by residents or vegetables eaten when grown in that soil as this contamination can cause cancer.

Defence came under heavy fire for its handling of the environmental disaster at a one-day hearing held at Williamstown on 24th July, 2018 as part of a parliamentary inquiry into poly-and per-flouroalkyl (PFAS) contamination in and around military areas. Residents and community groups detailed a litany of complaints about the Defence's handling of the pollution scandal , calling for another authority to take charge.
